Anger Coping Worksheet

Name	lame Date
Suppose you've been feeling angry a lot these days and feel like it's becoming unhealthy and a problem in your daily life and relationships. In that case, it's time for you to take a step back and examine the causes of your anger and how		io. you to take a crop o
Here, we've prepared an Ange	•	help vou take a look at vo	ur anger through reflection
			-
-	and write about them. Hopefully, through this worksheet, we can determine the next steps to help you process your anger in healthy ways and avoid unfavorable situations that result in acting out in anger.
First, here's a checklist of general triggers. Tick off the ones that apply to you:
☐ You're having a spat with y	☐ You're having a spat with your partner
☐ Your child isn't listening to	☐ Your child isn't listening to you or did something wrong
☐ You're having trouble with your parents or other relatives
☐ You're overwhelmed at work
☐ You're having an argumen	t with your co-worker o	boss
☐ There's a big crowd in a normally uncrowded place that you haunt
☐ Your neighbors are too noisy
☐ You received unsolicited advice or opinions
☐ You were threatened by a hooligan
☐ You were wrongly accused	l of something
☐ A friend disagreed with you	ı
☐ The political situation in your city or country is terrible
☐ Something came up that ruined your plans
□ Someone is harassing you
□ Being stuck in traffic for ho	ours
☐ People who don't follow rules or are inconsiderate
□ Someone insulted you
□ Someone invaded your privacy
☐ You reached out to someo	ne and were ignored
□ Other:
Second, you'll see a box of things that you might want to try in order to calm down and relax, in case you are feeling angry at something or someone.
Go to the beach	Climb a mountain	Ride a bicycle	Doodle cartoons
Take a bath	Go for a hike	Go to the gym	Paint something
Listen to music	Take scenic photos	Lift weights	Clean your room
Go for a walk alone	Cook or bake	Go for a swim	Build something
Walk with your pet	Have a hearty meal	Read a book	Hang out with friends
Play with your pet	Dine at a restaurant	Write something	Tend to your garden
r lay with your pet	Diffe at a restaurant	winte something	Teria to your garden Third, is the journal proper. There are event tables where you write the following as descriptively as possible:
Trigger: What exactly happened that triggered your anger? Did you experience any warning signs such as headaches, sweating, or clenched fists, or did you start raising your voice?
• Response: When you felt angry, did you do anything? Examples include: yelling at the person you're talking to, you broke something, and you stormed out of the room.

• Outcome: When you acted out in anger, what was the outcome? Are you not on speaking terms with the person you're angry at? Did you go to bed and cry yourself to sleep? Did you get suspended from work or school?

Name		Date
	ter all of that, what did you do t se: Looking back (if you acted	o calm yourself and relax? out in anger), what would you have done
Event One
Trigger
Response
Outcome
Coping activity
Alternative response
Event Two
Trigger
Response
Outcome
Coping activity
Alternative response
Event Three
Trigger
Response
Outcome
Coping activity
Alternative response

Name		Date
Event Four Trigger
Response
Outcome
Coping activity
Alternative response
Event Five
Trigger
Response
Outcome
Coping activity
Alternative response
Last, by any chance, did you notice any patterns related to your experiences with anger, like common warning signs or coping activities (whether healthy or unhealthy)? Please indicate in the box.				