

Healthy Boundaries Worksheet

Name: _____ Date: _____

Objective:

This worksheet is designed to help individuals identify and establish healthy boundaries in various areas of their lives. By reflecting on personal values, needs, and comfort levels, users can better understand how to maintain healthy relationships with themselves and others.

Instructions:

1. Read each category carefully.
2. Reflect on your values, needs, and comfort levels in each area.
3. In the 'Personal Boundaries' column, write down the boundaries you want to set in that area.
4. In the 'Action Plan' column, list the steps you will take to implement and maintain these boundaries.

| Area | Personal Boundaries | Action Plan |
|------------------------------|---------------------|-------------|
| Emotional Boundaries | | |
| Physical Boundaries | | |
| Time Boundaries | | |
| Intellectual Boundaries | | |
| Material Boundaries | | |
| Relationship Boundaries | | |
| Professional/Work Boundaries | | |
| Digital/Online Boundaries | | |

Areas Explained:

- 1. Emotional Boundaries: The limits you set on sharing and receiving emotions, including how you express and manage your feelings with others.
- 2. Physical Boundaries: The limits you set on touch, personal space, and physical safety.
- 3. Time Boundaries: The limits you set on allocating your time, including work-life balance and time spent with others.
- 4. Intellectual Boundaries: The limits you set on sharing and receiving thoughts, ideas, and opinions, including respectful disagreement and intellectual property.
- 5. Material Boundaries: The limits you set on sharing, lending, or borrowing personal possessions and money.
- 6. Relationship Boundaries: The limits you set on behaviors and expectations within different relationships, such as romantic partners, family, and friends.
- 7. Work/Professional Boundaries: The limits you set on work-related tasks, responsibilities, and interactions with colleagues and supervisors.
- 8. Digital/Online Boundaries: The limits you set on digital communication and social media usage, including sharing personal information, privacy settings, and screen time.

Remember: Boundaries are personal, and no right or wrong answer exists. The goal is to establish boundaries that promote your well-being and help maintain healthy relationships with others. Be open to revisiting and adjusting your boundaries as your needs and circumstances change.